Guest Editorial

As most of you know, Watchmen recently appeared on the big screen. Superhero movies have been big recently, with Batman, Spider-Man, Iron Man, and a variety of others providing us with larger-than-life role models on the big screen. Given that Watchmen was originally an attempt to deconstruct the superhero mythos, it's interesting to see it so well received.

During the movie, as in the comic book, we have a rape scene, gang violence, a prison riot, and a protest that turns into a riot. Oh, and of course a bit of nastiness in Vietnam. Each of these events were escalated by the heroes. There is one scene where two of the characters save the lives of several innocent people trapped in a burning building. Pretty heroic, right? This tends to be a bit spoiled by the fact that this rescue ends up being foreplay for them.

It has been said that the book uses violence to convey the harsh truth—that the violence is there to shock the reader, to disrupt their comfortable assumptions about the nature of heroes. The movie on the other hand, seems to embrace the violence. To some degree, it's the difference in the medium, but does that not change the message?

Looking back at the recent superhero movies, it seems to me that the super part is still present, in that the characters are all beyond human in some way, but the hero part seems to have gotten lost somewhere.

Yes, Batman still saves the day, but he does it using a program that turns every cellphone in the city into a listening device, something straight out of the wet dreams of a government spook. Sure, it's just the one time, to stop a dangerous madman, and sure, he gives the power to someone he believes can handle it, someone who doesn't want the power...but he knows it works. You can't put the genie back in the bottle; the technology may not be available at the moment, but it wouldn't be hard to rebuild.

Prior to creating this monstrosity, he violates international law, kidnapping a Chinese citizen and forcefully extracting him from his office. Yes, he's doing this to prevent a criminal from escaping justice, but does the end justify the means? The way it is presented, it seems that it is assumed that it does—especially since the only reason he wants this particular white collar criminal is to use him against the real criminals, in this case, organized crime.

It is said that those who would trade liberty for safety deserve neither, but that implies that we are all responsible for our liberties. While people might agree with this in theory, it is something that falls apart in practice.

It is a sad commentary on our times that our heroes have fallen so far, from the noble souls of the golden age, to the gritty and bitter bastards of the modern era.

Good start.

There is an option to the question of “hard-copy or no hard-copy.” A subscription has to cover the cost of reproducing the issue, plus an envelope, and postage. But just as good a hard copy can be printed out at your local Kinko’s for just the cost of the xerox. Most copiers can print back to back sheets, so there isn’t any difference between a copy printed out by BCSFA and one printed out by yourself.

[You’d have to print the PDF, then paste together a galley proof (with the pages seemingly out of sequence until after collation), then photocopy and collate it. For a higher price, the clerk might be able to do all this for you—as the clerk at Staples did for me when she printed and collated a test copy of BCSFAzine #430—though Kinko’s did not offer this level of service the last time I was there.]

Of course, I don’t usually do this myself. Unless the zine is one of those I really treasure—Trapdoor, say, or Banana Wings—and I don’t have words or pictures in it, I will usually choose to save the .pdf on the hard drive—that’s good enough. But if the issue is one I have a contribution in, I take it to Kinko’s and pay the two bucks for a copy. If it had to be mailed to me, doubtless it would have cost twice that.

Dear Felicity:

Whoops, almost sent it to Garth...old habits die hard. Thank you for being willing to take on the task of producing monthly BCSFAzines, and here’s a letter on the contents of BCSFAzine 430. Mmmm, bacon snakes...

Sometimes, all the club needs is someone to keep track of everything the club intends to give to its members, and what the members have on account. The club does need money to keep going, so I guess memberships are still free, but BCSFAzine costs $3 a month. I’ve been happy to get the .pdfed version. Some other editors I know have asked people to accept a .pdf, but they just won’t, and the worst thing is, many of those who want the paper version are not contributors, and won’t contribute, even when pressed.

Fans stacked like cordwood...this makes the assumption that fans are mostly thin, and I think we can blow that assumption out of the water. I am surprised that no one's made any remarks about any fans they'd like to be stacked with...

Warren Buff knows about the costs of Worldcons, as do many of us. They are not cheap, and it would be good to go back to the old ways of a Worldcon at a hotel and banquet hall, but we also know that Worldcon is competing for the fannish dollar against Dragon*Con and Creation conventions and most media SF events. The Worldcon would be cheaper, in terms of cost and quality, IMHO. Eventually, most of these events will price themselves out of their markets, and many of them will die or change form. I shall not speculate on the fate of Worldcon, but the future has shown itself to be not nearly as shiny as we'd hoped.

Fandom is a cultural phenomenon, and is bigger than we expect. There is always something new to learn about it, and something new being created within it. I have seen older fans dump on newer fans for not knowing something esoteric about fandom; if the older fans would teach rather than dump, the newer fans would be more knowledgeable. Also, many of the fannish publications I remember being told I should read are usually unavailable, being long out of print. Any fan that has a copy isn't about to lend it out, either, so we chase away more new fans this way. And fanzine fandom then asks where are our successors? We've disposed of them already. There are no fans that know everything about fandom, no matter how loudly they might brag.

(Just for the record...the e-mail you had listed for me was at sgsintl.com...I wish I was still there, but I don't work for SGS any more. This e-mail will come from my regular home-based Allstream account.)

[Noted!]

As I write, it is just before Corflu Zed. Is anyone from Vancouver going to this convention? Wish I was, but no money coming in means me not going out. A web camera will probably be set up so that activities at the con can be seen online.

[I like that idea.]

I see that another Creation Convention is coming up in April...I hope someone will alert the local taxation office to see if Creation is paying their taxes.

Ah, there's my birthday on the list...that will be my 50th birthday. Not sure what's going to happen on that day, if my hair's going to turn white or finish falling out. I will trust that the Montreal Worldcon will make me feel a little younger.

Fan funds...Yvonne and I are in the unique position of having been asked to stand as nominators for candidates for TAFF, DUFF and CUFF. We are nominators for Steve Green for TAFF, and I will wait for the DUFF and CUFF candidates to make their own announcements. I don't want to steal their thunder.

My only advice to Michael Bertrand is that if he doesn't like what the voices in his head tell him to do, go with a generally neutral source, such as a bowl of Rice Krispies. Get the t-shirt, and go for it. If you don't like what your Rice Krispies tell you, I can't help you further. (Just in case I don't find work, Michael, how much are you paying to be a voice in your head? Will I have to commute?)

I think I'm done here, Felicity...welcome to the job, you knew it was dangerous when you took it. Thank you for doing it.

[Thank you for your letters.]

Yours,

Lloyd Penney.

You give good zine. You may do even better, as you leave my standard layout behind and try out different experiments.

[I experimented with an 8½×5½-inch "landscape" layout for this issue, but I couldn't make the cover illustration and table of contents fit that way.

[Instead, this month's experiment is setting the headlines in Arial.]

A calendar might be more useful to people, the further in advance they receive notice of conventions. Two months may not be enough, as I pointed out years ago, when Dan Dubrick did the convention calendar. I wonder how far in advance people plan and budget for congoing? (Comments, everyone?)

[Good question. The convention calendar is full-length in the PDF, and truncated to two months in the print edition to save postage.]

Equally, I wonder how many people gazed at the Corflu, Worldcon, fan fund and Vegas Fandom Weekly news without comprehension. How much background will you have to explain to readers, I wonder? What do you say, guys?

M.C. Parrott's article was engrossing, because I've been mulling over the question of how and why civilization arose, and whether it was in fact a bad idea. Actually I'm half-inclined to think civilization—meaning, various agrarian societies—arose in different ways in different times and places, for a variety of reasons and by various means. My favourite theory is that settled villages first arose in the Near East so that people could stay in one place long enough to brew beer.

Michael Bertrand's article was a laugh riot. You really have to draw the line with these cranial commentators; they have all the drawbacks of TV sports show hosts without the air of intelligence.

Late News But Great News

Murray Moore writes:

“During a conversation today with Lance I learned that Lance received approximately $1,000 from Brian Davis.

“Lance received this money last May. Lance remembers Brian Davis explaining to Lance that he had had medical problems and had to sell some of his property to repay the CUFF money with which he was entrusted.

“The current balance in the CUFF account, including the Brian Davis money, is $2,162.03.

“As for the current race, recently Lance sent info about the CUFF race to 35 groups west of the Ontario border, organizations and clubs and cons and magazines Neo-Opsis and On Spec. He will follow up soon with a nomination deadline.

“And a race is possible this year. Lance has received two strong expressions of interest; in which case Lance will send a ballot to the same 35 groups, leading to income from the voting fee for the CUFF bank account, plus more publicity.”

‘Cinema Sewer Volume Two’

The ultimate guide to the wildest excesses of grindhouse movies and beyond... Get Ready to Be Flushed!

The celebrated underground smash that is Cinema Sewer the magazine has been transformed and mutated into Cinema Sewer: The Book—and following the runaway success of the first volume, we’re delighted to be unleashing Volume Two onto a now slightly-less-unsuspecting world!

A mind-melting compilation of gonzo writing, illustration and comics about the most insane, sexy, awkward, cheesy, hilarious, upsetting and jaw-dropping movies in the history of film, Cinema Sewer joyously celebrates the sleaziest aspects of the moviegoing experience, whilst delving deep into bizarre cinematic history.

Author and comic artist Robin Bougie takes a dive to the bottom of the cesspool of sexploitation, doing so in a distinctive manner that has made him famous amongst a loyal following of cult film fans. If anything, Cinema Sewer acts as Robin’s handmade journal, preserving the DIY ’zine aesthetic and carrying it kicking and screaming into the future via articles packed with bizarre trivia and personal insights about the movies your mama always warned you about.

Issues 13 to 17 of this celebrated underground smash magazine are exhaustively revised and collated in this second wild volume, together with an additional 80 pages of never-before-seen interviews, rants, comics, hard-to-find classic movie advertising, and graphic illustrations by Bougie and a host of his talented friends from both the comic book and animation industry. Regardless of whether the reader is just discovering the world of classic porn, horror, and exploitation movies, or if they’re a long time fan from the days when the drive-ins and grindhouses reigned, they’ll find plenty to get excited about, gleefully sloshing around in the filth of the Cinema Sewer!

“Robin provides the most thorough and heartfelt coverage of adult cinema I’ve ever seen.”—Dale Ashmun, Psychotronic Magazine

“Prepare to veer wildly between curiosity, arousal, disgust, laughter, disbelief, embarrassment, confusion and uncontrollable glee. Such is the power of Cinema Sewer.”—David Bertrand, The Nerve Magazine

“Cinema Sewer is about as disreputable a movie book as they come. Bougie implicates himself in his own tastes more fearlessly than just about any film critic out there.”—Rob Gonsalves, hollywoodbitchslap.com

The Author/Editor: In 1997, underground comic artist and zine publisher Robin Bougie began Cinema Sewer magazine, an ode to the seamier side of film and the culture which surrounds it. With an obscenely large collection of rare press books, posters, and obscure deranged movies, Bougie used his geek knowledge, his artistic skills as comic book artist, and connections in the world of porn (his day job is a porn industry journalist for magazines such as Fox and Screw) to give birth to this unseemly but loveable bastard-child of a publication. Printed comic-sized on cruddy newsprint—"a reading experience meant to take place in the bathroom while defecating" as one critic put it—the magazine quickly found an audience amongst film fans looking for something totally different. Bougie contributes liner notes for DVD releases for companies such as Something Weird Video and has self-published over 70 comic books since he was 18.

BCSFA.net to Be Salvaged

Garth Spencer was going into his act again recently, offering to create a BCSFA Members' Handbook in the face of zero demand, and offering to post it on BCSFA.net. He quickly found out that no one knew who was ostensibly in charge of our website, let alone how to get some control of it, and Fearless Leader Graeme suggested Garth contact Greg Slade. Greg said he had no time to look after the website, and before Garth knew it he was offering to take it over. Greg has emailed Garth a zip file of the BCSFA.net pages.

Garth is now tasked to produce his own updated version and run it past Graeme for approval. This will very likely absorb 80% of the material for the Handbook, and let people receive a more manageable publication.

There is no word on whether anyone in BCSFA feels a need for a renewed Members' Directory.

Vancouver Fan Meetups

Keith Lim sent a message to the members of Vancouver Fandom on Facebook:

Hi all in the Vancouver Fandom group,

I'm going to try to start posting news about local fan meetups, but I admit I'm not the best person to do that (I don't have the habit of posting things often, e.g. I don't blog or use Twitter). This is the sort of thing that is best done by multiple people—so once again, I'm inviting/asking people to help run this group, if you're so inclined.

Fan meetups this week are the Harry Potter Meetup on Monday 16 March, and the Battlestar Galactica finale meetup on Friday 20 March. (Check the News section of the group for the details and links.)

How the Royal Swiss Navy Did Not Solve the Assassinations of George H. Bush, George W. Bush, Elijah Harper, Stephen Harper, Billy Graham, Joshua Graham, and a Cast of Thousands of Uniformed Americans in the Middle East (and Hundreds of Canadians As Well)

I.M. Tasteless

Two people showed up at the Boston Pizza on Broadway, Garth Spencer and Julian Castle. I could multiply the number by giving their various aliases, but the RSN doesn't want me to. After three or four drinks (alcoholic, in Garth's case) they came to certain conclusions. One, people going to FRED should learn sign language, especially on game nights like the crowded night we found at Boston's Pizza. Garth waited nearly an hour for a table and then only Julian showed up. Two, the Royal Swiss Navy should search for the successor to Emperor Norton. Three, if BCSFA needs women, as Garth famously wrote in one BCSFAzine editorial, then we should advertise enticing themes for BCSFA meetings the way MonSFFA does for its meetings, as by organizing "Hunks of SF/Fantasy" film showings. Also, Garth has to get off his ass and actually tell the BCSFAzine trades that the address has changed. (Some people are still mailing to Garth's defunct PO Box, and haven't caught on that we have a whole new editor, hint hint MonSFFA.) Garth said something inarticulate about three-dimensional intergalactic hockey with multispecies participation, but Julian didn't quite get it. A wooden leg named Psmith. We retired about 10 p.m.

The end.
