4-19-04 Dear me! What to do about President Bush's war in Iraq? He lied to the world (and especially us!) in order to justify his 'preemptive,' unconstitutional attack on Iraq. So far he's killed about 7-10,000 Iraq people with his world-record bombings (remember when they bragged about the massive tonnage of bombs and missiles?) and over 700 United States soldiers (and never mind the numbers of wounded).

Bush is by his admission following God's agenda for the world. He knows because God told him. He is doing God's work. With that kind of authority, the end justifies the means and God's might makes right. Right?

Face it: George W. Bush is a religious nut. [And if the American people re-elect George W. Bush (or the electronic voting machines say they did), the American people will get the dictator they deserve.]

And after capturing Saddam (which was supposed to break the heart and back of the resistance), we now see an astonishing increase in numbers and effectiveness of attacks on our 'coalition' forces. Said coalition is shrinking daily, with Spain gone, and San Salvador and Poland and Thailand probably going next.

We see our forces starting major operations with much fanfare and bravado and then stopping (after unacceptable casualties and horrible political & enemy-creating consequences) under cover of cease fires which last and last. We see the 'insurgents' taking the initiative. We see defeat and losses and failure everywhere.

We see the foreshadowing of at least a three-way civil war in Iraq in which we will be the common enemy trying to 'keep the peace' (and what peace will that be? We may end up asking plaintively, "Saddam! Where are you now that we need you?" Too late.

Obviously, we should follow the good example of Vietnam, where that peaceful socialist nation is shifting to a mixed economy and thriving decades after we lost our 'intervention' war there and ignominiously cut and ran.

We survived the humiliation of losing the Vietnamese war, and we will easily survive losing in Iraq.

We should pull out of Iraq and throw out Bush and his dumbfuck helpers and swear to God to never send an expeditionary force overseas ever again!

Enough with this 'world leadership' arrogance and hubris. The American people no longer are willing to pay and die for an American Corporate World Empire. Let the Oil Corporations hire their own private army and navy and air force.
