12-13-05 THE DAMNING ADMISSION EVERYONE IGNORES

After his speech yesterday before the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia, during a rare Q&A period, President Bush said, in response to a "Saddam threat" question:

"I made a tough decision. [to invade Iraq] And knowing what I know today, I'd make the decision again. Removing Saddam Hussein makes this world a better place and America a safer country."

EXCUSE ME? He said that if he had known Saddam did not have a nuke program and did not have other weapons of mass destruction nor plans to make them, he STILL would have invaded Iraq?

He thinks deposing a weakened, UN-sanctioned Saddam (who had an army one-third as strong as before the Gulf war conducted by Bush's father) was worth the most destructive and deadly 'shock & awe' bombing campaign in history---35,000 Iraqi deaths, over 2200 of our soldiers...and counting....

So George W. Bush, our noble, principled, sincere president, admits to being a shallow, stupid, ruthless sociopath whose ruinous war was motivated by a need to surpass his father, or by a need to please his oil masters, or by a need to MAKE HISTORY, or by a need to please his God's assumed master plan for humanity, or by all or most of the above.

And so far the headlines and 'opinion makers' haven't picked up on the above astonishing, shameful admission.

But there it is. Never mind that nuclear North Korea, China, Russia, and soon-to-be nuclear Iran were greater dangers to us and to the world. Bush had an agenda, a master plan for invasions and remaking the middle-east, and for being a world history hero, and lo, it has all blown up in his face.

So now let's watch with vast amuse as this tragic comedy plays out. A couple years from now we could easily see Iraq dictatorially ruled by a Shiite religious government with close ties and obligations to a nuke-armed Iran, and with Iran in effective control of Iraq's vast oil capacity and reserves (added to its own).

The disaster(s) and hilarity could go in a lot of bad news directions.

What then, o president? Will it have been worth it?

And what then, all you morons who voted for George W. Bush, believed his lies and perhaps gave your sons and daughters to his war?
