12-20-05 IRAQ...and the result is...OH, NO!

I chuckle, I snirkle with glee. That abject fool and his crew in the White House have miscalculated again and are on the road to wrack and ruin.

Early returns from the Iraq election on Dec. 15 apparently show a big win for the Shiite Alliance (the Moslem God-Firsters) and a miserable defeat for the secularist Moslems who were heavily favored by the Bushites and Bush's U.S. government.

Gad, I just got through speculating that this would happen, with our new enemy Iran (also Moslem God-Firsters) in the catbird seat of influence and power in Iraq.

How frightful! How delightful!

I guess Bush's new reason for having invaded Iraq (now it is spreading magical Democracy in the Middle East) has turned bitter and flawed in mere days! Allah has won! Oh, Jesus, why has thou forsaken thy not-so-humble servant? Is Jesus yielding our president to His Father for a revengeful fate---a burning Bush?

Oh, and my prediction a few Opinions ago, that a high administration official would make a surprise visit to Iraq to give the latest orders to 'our' government there...has proved correct. None other than Vice President Dick Cheney made the secret, surprise trip right after the Iraq election. Trouble is, the Iraq government isn't going to be 'ours' much longer.

And it was a surprise visit; the Iraq prime minister (our lackey) wasn't even told in advance. Wanna know why? Because the insurgents have spies high in the Iraq government and had they learned of Cheney's ETA the insurgents might have made an attempt to shoot down the v.p.'s plane or attack his motorcade.

That would have been...embarrassing.

Cheney also conferred with the highest U.S. military commanders... [“Now, here’s my plan...”] Then went on, secretly, of course, to visit Afghanistan. [“My, aren’t thousands of acres of poppies beautiful from the air? Do we get a cut from the opium trade?”]

He’s back now, safe and sound. We’ll see what orders he gave, and their consequences, soon.

I note there has crept into the news a tiny hint that the full, official results of the Dec. 15 Iraq election may take longer than the original estimate of two weeks. Some ‘irregularities...’ as I also predicted.

But even I would be surprised if the existing U.S.-backed secular government tried to steal the election from the fundamentalist Shiites. Then you’d really have an insurgency---triple the current size, and it would be an all-out civil war before you could say Holy Shit!
